

Press Release

October 15, 2006

Pace University is happy to announce that it has become a Red Hat Linux Academy Training Partner.

This partnership with Red Hat enables Pace to offer the highest quality training in Red Hat Linux, including preparation for Red Hat certification exams. All classes are taught by certified and experienced instructors at Pace's Midtown NYC and White Plains locations. The Pace University Computer Learning Center is the ONLY Red Hat Linux Academy training partner in the greater NYC/Westchester area.

Now that Linux has become the preferred operating system for Internet servers, the need for Linux skills in the IT industry has never been greater. In fact, the demand for experienced Linux professionals has more than doubled in just two years in NYC and Westchester alone.

As a Linux Red Hat Academy partner, Pace provides a more comprehensive and effective syllabus than non-affiliated Linux training centers. On average, over 90% of Red Hat Linux Academy partner students obtain certification—more than double the success rate (<45%) of 4-and 5-day training programs.

Pace offers Red Hat Linux training for both RHCT (Red Hat Certified Technician) and RHCE (Red Hat Certified Engineer) certification. Linux RHCT certification establishes first level Linux credentials, while Linux RHCE certification confirms the ability to configure networking services and security on servers running the Red Hat Linux OS.

To learn more, contact Pace at (212) 346-1222 or (914) 422-4054.

